

University Recognition

Recognition of the Common European Framework (CEFR) based Language Examinations by European Universities for the Purposes of Admission

Issued by: Higher Education Relations, Euroexam International

Last updated: 15 November, 2017

Universities require proof of language competence from students who have not previously studied in the target language of the course. However, the proof required varies not only from university to university but from faculty to faculty and even course to course within a faculty. Language requirements range from a university's senate recognition of a particular examination to the evaluation of individual's language competence by a university's language centre based on the criteria determined by admission officers.

All universities recognise the CEFR levels and many base their requirements on CEFR levels only. Students presenting with a Euroexam Certificate at the required CEFR level (B2 or C1) will be accepted for consideration of entry at the following universities or faculties at the stated university:
